CLINICAL FOCUS

A large part of Dr. Uslu's practice is the care of newborns and infants. This includes newborn follow-up in the first weeks of life, newborn screening tests, and the assessment and treatment of neonatal jaundice.

In older children, Dr. Uslu diagnoses and treats childhood infectious diseases and upper respiratory tract illnesses, and he evaluates children with iron deficiency and anemia, including laboratory assessment and treatment planning. He also has clinical experience with Kawasaki disease, a condition in which timely recognition and follow-up are important.
