CLINICAL FOCUS

In the youngest patients, Dr. Okur provides newborn follow-up and assesses newborn jaundice. He sees infants with colic and evaluates suspected lactose intolerance in infants, as well as pediatric nutrition disorders that can affect feeding and weight gain.

He also assesses and treats iron deficiency and anemia in children. Other areas of his work include constipation in children, hematuria (blood in the urine) and urinary incontinence in children. In these situations, the evaluation usually begins with a detailed history and a clinical examination, and further tests are considered only where they are needed. More broadly, Dr.
