CLINICAL FOCUS

A substantial part of Dr. Demir's practice concerns disorders of glucose metabolism and body weight. He assesses and manages patients with prediabetes, a state in which blood glucose levels are elevated but do not yet meet the criteria for diabetes, and patients with established type 2 diabetes, for whom management typically involves lifestyle measures, medication where appropriate and regular monitoring.

Dr. Demir's subspecialty interest lies in thyroid diseases and their treatment. This includes the evaluation of patients with abnormal thyroid function and other thyroid-related complaints, followed by treatment and monitoring as indicated by the clinical findings. In addition, he sees patients with upper respiratory tract diseases, which are among the common conditions managed in general internal medicine.
