CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Charkazlı's clinical work covers three closely related areas. Advanced life support refers to the structured management of patients in cardiac arrest or other life-threatening emergencies, including airway management, ventilation, and circulatory support.

As an anesthesiologist, Dr. Charkazlı is also involved in the planning and delivery of anesthesia and in the care of patients during the recovery period. Decisions about anesthesia and critical-care management depend on each patient's condition, overall health, and the planned treatment, and are made together with the treating surgical or medical team.
