CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Özen's areas of expertise are medical biochemistry and clinical laboratory testing. Medical biochemistry is the laboratory discipline concerned with analyzing patient samples so that treating physicians can use the results alongside the patient's history, symptoms and other findings. Laboratory results are one part of a broader clinical picture, and their interpretation depends on the context in which they are requested.

Within the Clinical Laboratory unit, his work supports the diagnostic and follow-up processes of other departments rather than replacing them. Patients seen at the hospital who require laboratory testing may have their samples analyzed and reported within this unit, and the results are then reviewed by the physicians responsible for their care. Dr. Özen's long experience in different laboratory settings informs this work.
