CLINICAL FOCUS

A large part of Dr. Gençer's work concerns infections of the lower respiratory tract. She evaluates and treats patients with bronchitis and pneumonia, where the aim is to identify the likely cause of the infection, select appropriate treatment and monitor the response. Her training in clinical microbiology supports this work, since laboratory findings often guide the choice and duration of therapy.

Dr. Gençer also manages chronic and long-term viral infections. She sees patients with hepatitis and with HIV/AIDS, conditions that typically call for careful assessment, ongoing treatment and structured follow-up over time. Her expertise extends to sexually transmitted infections and to shingles, a reactivation of the varicella-zoster virus that can affect adults and may require prompt antiviral treatment.
