CLINICAL FOCUS

A central part of Dr. Konar's practice is intensive care treatment. Patients in an intensive care unit may require close monitoring of vital functions, support for breathing or circulation and careful adjustment of medication. This work is closely linked to advanced life support, which refers to the structured medical response to life-threatening situations such as cardiac or respiratory arrest.

Dr. Konar also has expertise in palliative care, which focuses on relieving symptoms and supporting comfort for patients with serious or advanced illness, and in pain management. Pain management may involve medication as well as interventional pain management approaches, depending on the type and source of the pain and the overall condition of the patient.
