CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Kırım's practice is centered on endocrinology, the branch of medicine concerned with hormone-producing glands and the disorders that arise when hormone levels are higher or lower than expected. Endocrine conditions are often long-term and may involve more than one organ system, so assessment typically includes a review of symptoms, laboratory results and, where relevant, imaging before a treatment plan is discussed.

Metabolic diseases form the second main area of his work. These are conditions that affect how the body processes energy, sugars and fats, and their management commonly combines lifestyle measures, medication and monitoring over time. Patients who wish to read more about how related conditions are approached at the hospital can consult the pages on thyroid disease treatment and metabolic syndrome treatment, which describe the...
