CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Çiftçi's field is medical pathology, the laboratory discipline that examines samples taken from the body in order to identify or exclude disease. A central part of his work is tissue sample evaluation. When a surgeon or other physician removes a piece of tissue, for example during a biopsy or an operation, the sample is prepared in the laboratory and examined by the pathologist, who describes what is seen and, where...

He also carries out cell sample evaluation, in which individual cells or small groups of cells, rather than intact tissue, are examined for changes that may indicate disease. Together, these activities form the pathological assessment that clinicians rely on when confirming a diagnosis, characterizing a condition or planning treatment. Because pathology reports often shape subsequent decisions, Dr.
