CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Özbek sees patients with known or suspected genetic conditions and those who have been referred for a diagnostic genetic evaluation. A typical evaluation begins with a detailed review of the patient's personal and family medical history, followed by a clinical assessment and, where appropriate, a discussion of which genetic tests may help clarify the diagnosis.

Genetic counseling is a central part of his work. This includes explaining what a genetic finding means, what it may imply for the patient and for relatives, and what options exist for further evaluation or follow-up. Dr. Özbek aims to present this information in plain language so that patients can understand the possible implications and take part in decisions about any next steps.
